Removal of Climate Action Plans and Links from the National Park Service's Climate Friendly Parks Program Website

Overview

92 documents regarding national parks' response to climate change have been removed from the National Park Service (NPS) "Climate Friendly Parks Program" website. NPS is part of the Department of the Interior. To become a Climate Friendly Parks (CFP) member, parks are required to meet four milestones,<sup>1</sup> which include developing a baseline of greenhouse gas emissions for park operations and completing a park climate action plan. Links to the parks' action plan documents and to two webpages detailing aspects of two particular parks' plans have been removed from a list of the Program's member national parks. No public NPS Web archive has yet been identified, but instructions to email NPS for access to the parks' action plans have been added.

Description of Changes in Access

1. On December 7, 2017, all links were removed from a list of 97 member park names on the NPS "Climate Friendly Parks Program" webpage (see December 6 version). The links previously led to documents and webpages describing what "parks are doing to respond to climate change and move park operations in a more sustainable direction" (Page 1).
2. By December 20, 2017, 92 park climate action plan documents, corresponding to 92 of the 97 removed links, were removed from the NPS website. Two of the other removed links for "Klondike Gold Rush National Historic Park" and "Yellowstone National Park" led to live webpages as of December 20, 2017. The remaining three park names had not been linked since October 7, 2015 (See List 1 for a list of all 97 park names and corresponding resources).
  - Note: No public NPS Web archive has yet been identified
3. Among the removed documents were climate action plans for prominent parks such as: "Glacier National Park", "Everglades National Park", "Joshua Tree National Park", and "Grand Canyon National Park". While EDGI has not yet spent substantial time analyzing the contents of these reports, many contain important research and policy determinations. For instance, the Grand Canyon National Park plan contains a section on reducing "park operations' energy use GHG emissions to 30 percent below 2008 levels by 2020" and another section exploring the likely impacts of different climate change scenarios, providing insight into the ways the park can improve its operations to mitigate climate change and adapt to its potential harms.
4. A note stating "If you would like to be emailed a copy of any listed park's action plan, please contact the NPS Sustainable Operations Branch: e-mail us" was added to the page (1.1b).
5. A link to a resource for NPS staff to learn more about becoming a CFP member and begin the membership process leads to an unavailable page (1.1a).

Becoming a CFP Member Park

The CFP Program is structured around 4 Milestones. Upon successful completion of all milestones, a park becomes an official Member Park.

- Milestone 1: Submit a CFP Application to express interest in the program and identify the park CFP team
- Milestone 2: Complete a GHG Inventory to develop a baseline emissions inventory for park operations
- Milestone 3: Conduct a CFP Workshop or webinar training to provide park staff, partners, and stakeholders with an educational opportunity to learn more about the potential impacts of climate change on park resources and discuss response strategies.
- Milestone 4: Complete a CFP Action Plan or Comprehensive Environmental Management System to outline planned sustainability and climate change response actions as well as educational initiatives to help educate visitors.

Status of Documents and Webpages Corresponding to Removed Links from List of Climate Friendly Parks Program Members
